Footprints in the grass
Sands of time in our eyes
Heads in the air
Hey—you say what?
Footprints: Footprints of:

Years gone by
washed into our eyes Violence untold
in early times
now impressed
into our world
Black and white learned different things
good
bad
no agreeance
"Until death do us part"
now a memory
of great men
and close friends Dirt and hate and blood it's cruel and without heart
No heart?
no life
it can't go on.
But Footprints
Footprints always somewhere
someplace
they never let go there's always a memory

A memory of Years gone by a memory of
past Footprints following and haunting
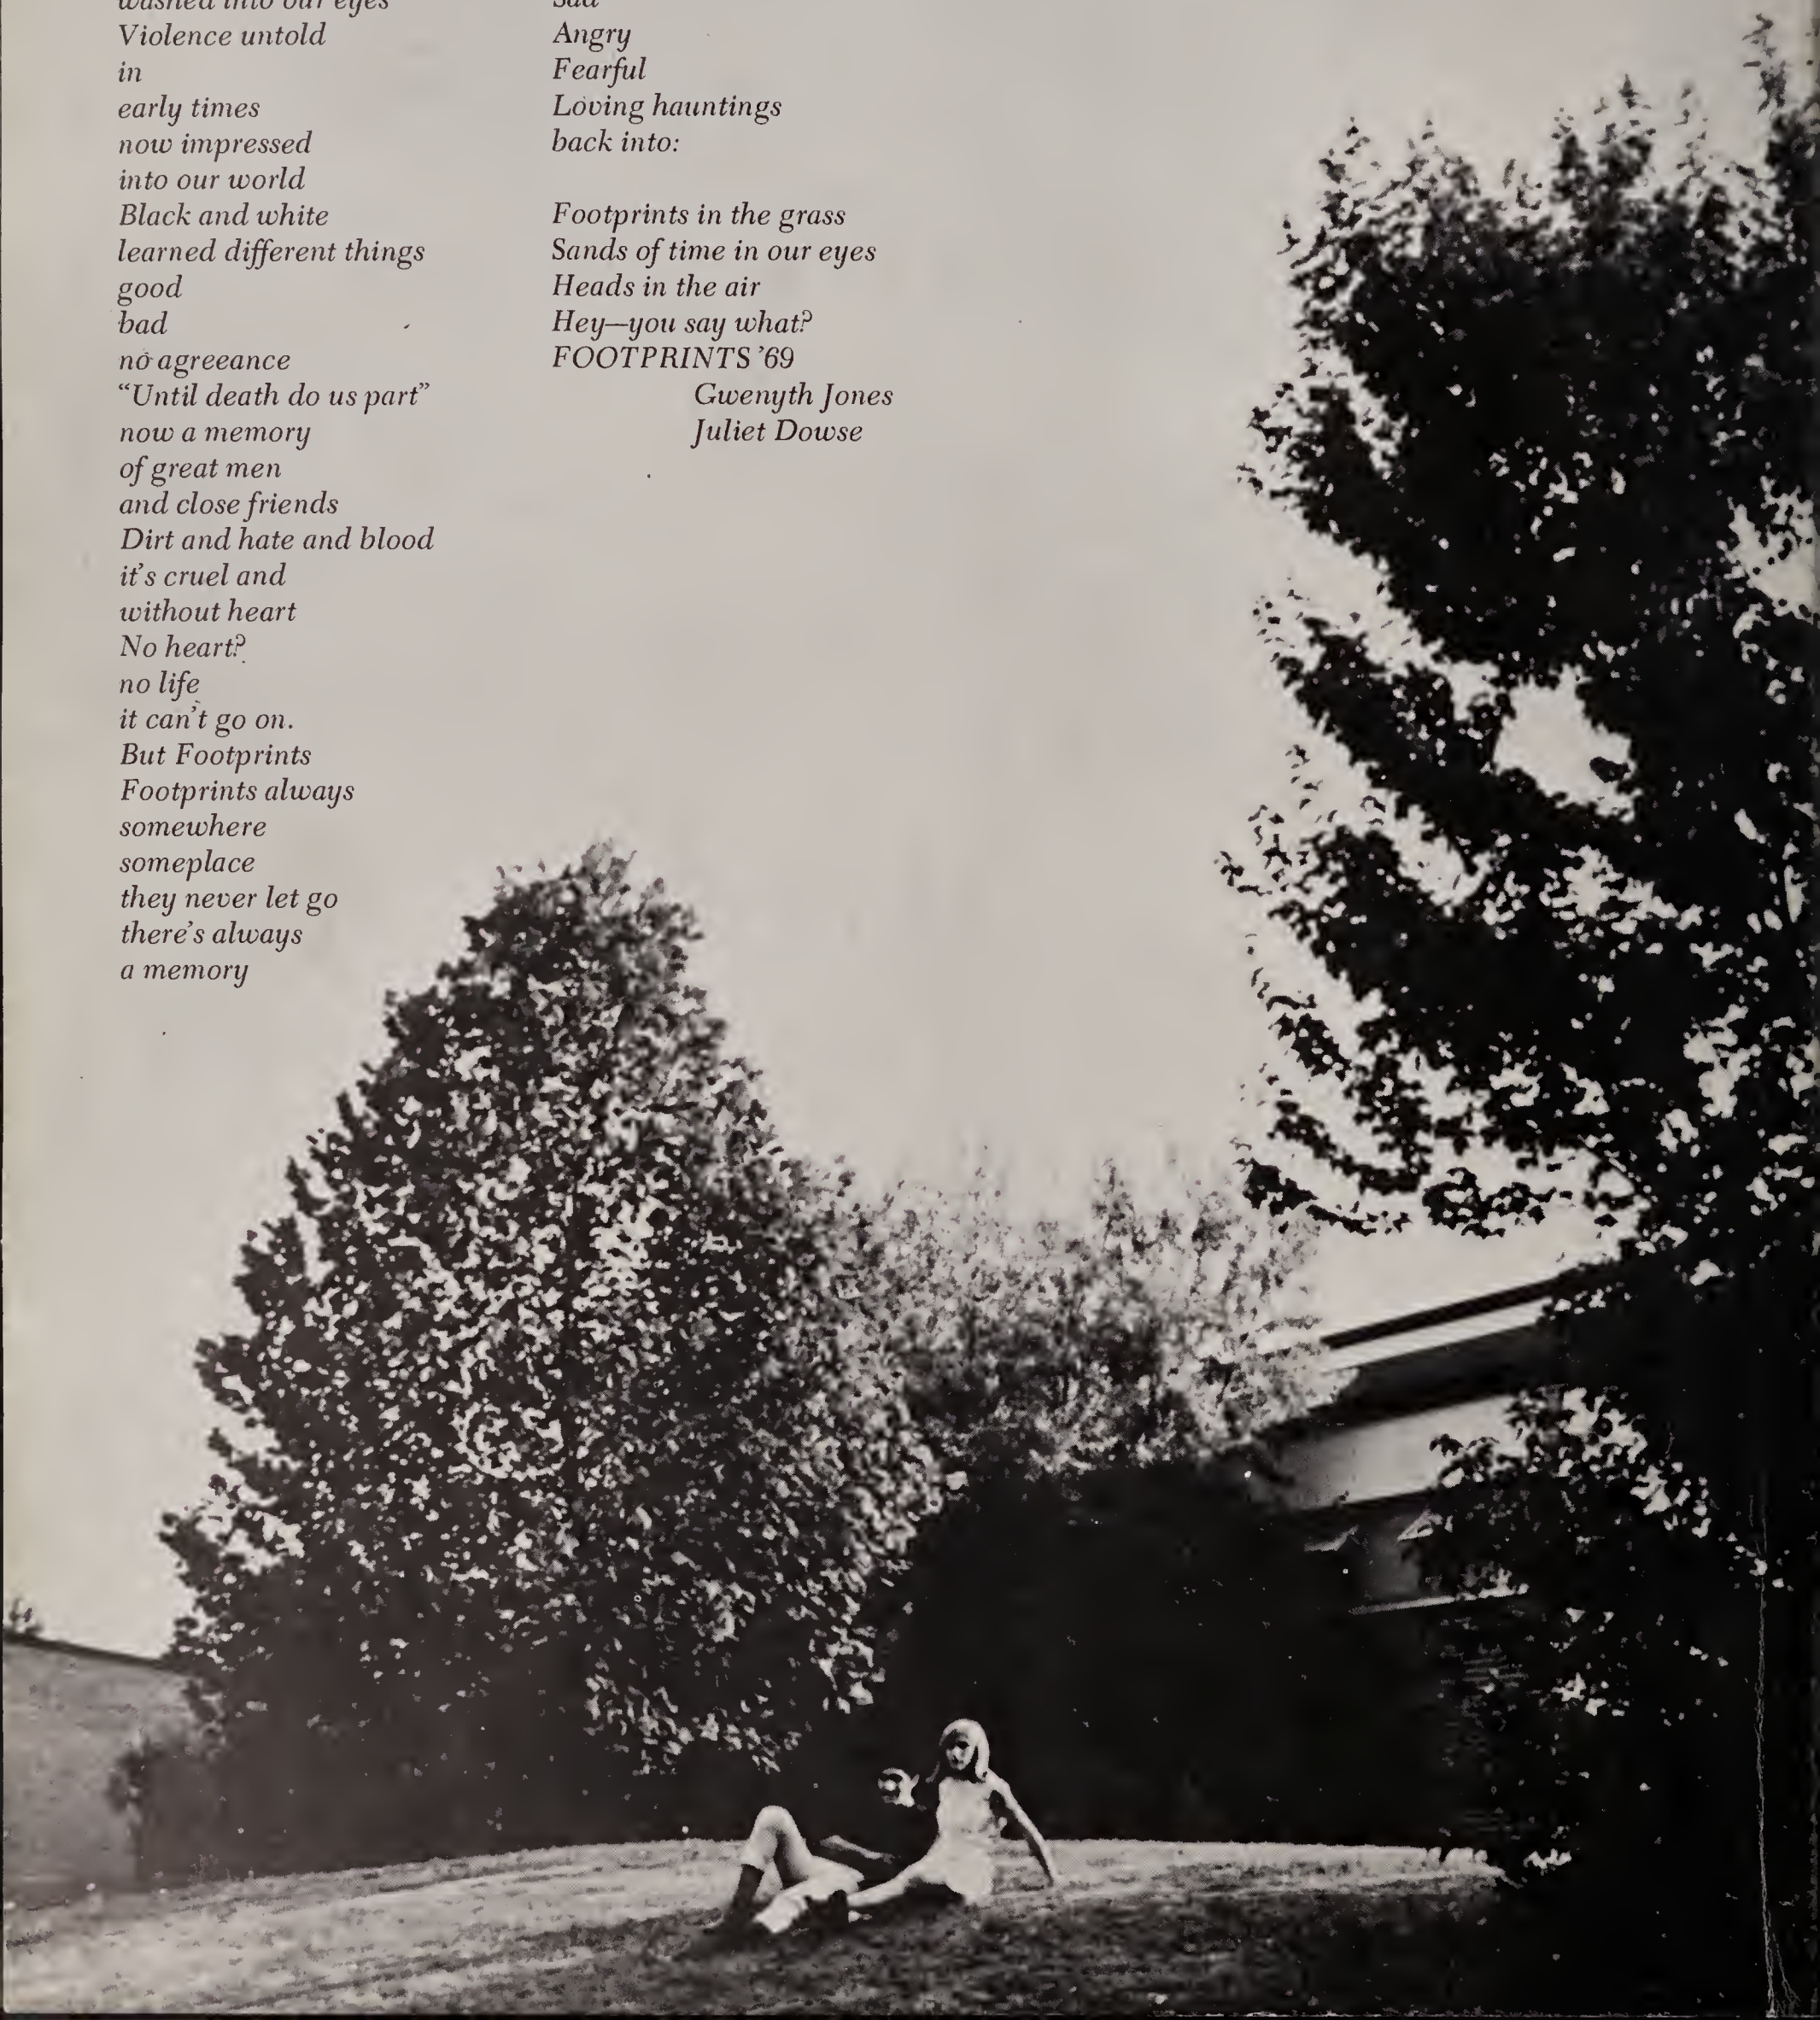
Happy
Sad
Angry
Fearful
Loving hauntings
back into:

Footprints in the grass
Sands of time in our eyes
Heads in the air
Hey—you say what?
FOOTPRINTS '69

Gwenyth Jones
Juliet Dowse



We, the class of 1969, dedicate our yearbook to a man who justly deserves the recognition, Mr. John Stayn.

You have shown us how to dress "a la mode," but with discretion. As you walk about Weston High School, your jovial comments brighten our days. Your sedate and almost comical expressions unconsciously cause much amusement, while your demanding requests in science class have forced us to be serious. You have given us enough knowledge and incentive so that we may plunge into Physics or Biology II—and even the "science" of living our lives better. Thank you, Mr. Stayn.
